

Opinion

SPOKE

Editor: Anthony Saxon
 Assistant Editor: Maria K. Hoskins
 Production Editor: Wendy Cole
 Sports Editor: Mike Williams
 Advertising: Cathy Rogers
 Staff: Lynda Courtney
 Contributor: Scott McMichael

Readers are encouraged to send their letters to the editor, preferably students at Gonzaga College.

The views and opinions expressed in this newspaper do not necessarily reflect the views of the editors.

Readers should not be held responsible for damages, physical or of any kind, resulting from the use of this newspaper.

Address: Saxon, Gonzaga College, 2000 West Valley Road, Chicago, Illinois 60648. Telephone: (312) 634-0000.

Call me Indiana

By Cathy Rogers

I like to think of myself as an adolescent, travelling to the far reaches of the universe in search of knowledge with a Kluge or Travis film as the vehicle for my quest.

Kluge or Travis is not for the weak or faint, seeking the comfort of an exclusive literary cocoon. It signals an abrupt awakening, like me, who want to experience learning.

My quest starts at the last festival located in the windy downtown core of Spokane. From the safety of the tent I get a good view of the protesters and others who mature. These natives are doubtful that their fringe groups, the police, the local business and the media, all have the potential to be dangerous and I sensed them if it is possible. As a traveling for who knows the reason, the two approaches the edge of civilization, stopping briefly at a quiet outpost called Paradise Hill to pick up more people in search of the meaning of life.

Even though I've traveled this way thousands of times, I always find a hidden oasis of comfort as the bus pulls away from the security of the hill parking lot and heads out to the wilderness known as the suburbs.

I relax just after my apprehensions and sit back and enjoy watching the return of the friendly natives, commonly called "Yuppies." I see only happiness about the lifestyle the suburbs "Yuppies" lead.

The last pulling to the center of the wilderness and I look on wonder as the daily routine — Gonzaga College! My quest has been fulfilled.

I feel myself on the rocky road ahead, trying to connect to the future that is possible, from the back of my thighs and under the focus of knowledge.

Indiana Jones, all your heart out!

"NO POINT TO GET 80 OF HIS DOLLAR!"

50

You tell us:

Are there advantages to attending school in the summer?

"I don't know. Can you tell me of any?"

Mary Jane Waters
 1984
 part-time program

"No, I'm only here because I'm trying to fit two years of classes into this year."

Robert Updegraff
 Mechanical engineering —
 design track
 1984
 full-time program

"No, we are studying on a lot of our days study."

Lisa Whiting
 Mechanical engineering —
 design track
 1984
 full-time program

"It was the only time the course was offered."

Wendy Cox
 Real estate course

"Yes, I got through my program after not the school, so no advantage."

Jerry McMichael
 Education in the last year

"It's okay because there is no continuing time, and I have nothing else to do."

Wendy Wright
 1984
 part-time program

The key to stopping the spread of apathy is motivation

By

Anthony Saxon

Active and participation in many events in particular every student.

One has to experience with these people. Despite enthusiasm and hard work, they are at a social non-participation. The problem seems to have been solved.

One has to experience with these people. Despite enthusiasm and hard work, they are at a social non-participation. The problem seems to have been solved.

Another reason is the relatively large percentage of the student body that are students who are of these people have homes and families or are single parents and must make better use of their free time.

Finally, perhaps the biggest cause of this social apathy is the fact that Gonzaga is a common college, a fact which makes it a social non-participation. It may be that parents are apathetic.

For instance, when a common college is not doing well, living in the area, and not doing enough to make a name for itself, it is the same as a social non-participation. It may be that parents are apathetic.

The family involved in taking the fact, the responsibility of the family, the student involved in showing and the fact that only a small number of the student body have homes and families or are single parents and must make better use of their free time.

Finally, perhaps the biggest cause of this social apathy is the fact that Gonzaga is a common college, a fact which makes it a social non-participation. It may be that parents are apathetic.

For instance, when a common college is not doing well, living in the area, and not doing enough to make a name for itself, it is the same as a social non-participation. It may be that parents are apathetic.

The family involved in taking the fact, the responsibility of the family, the student involved in showing and the fact that only a small number of the student body have homes

